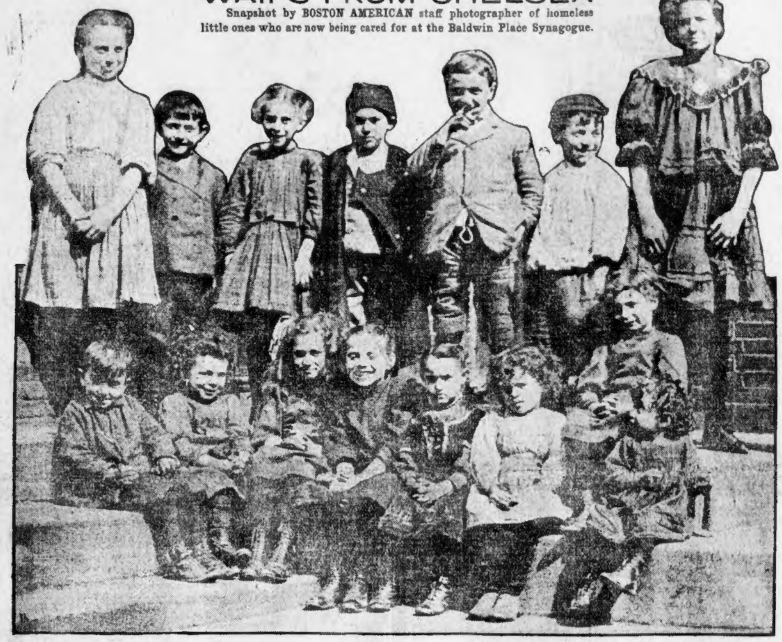
WOMEN INSANE FROM FIRE HORROR

WAIFS FROM CHELSEA

Snapshot by BOSTON AMERICAN staff photographer of homeless little ones who are now being cared for at the Baldwin Place Synagogue.



Found Wandering in Streets After Chelsea Disaster and Cared for at Marine Hospital—Another Body Found in the Ruins.

Two women driven insane by the awful scenes of Sunday, when they saw their homes burned, and who were found wandering about the streets shrieking madly, are at the Marine Hospital in Chelsea.

One has been identified as Mrs. Mary O'Brien of Highland street, Chelsea. Her condition is so serious that the hospital authorities to-day decided that they would have her committed to the insane asylum at Westfield.

The other woman whose reason has been destroyed is Mrs. Margaret Jordan of No. 50 Maverick street, Chelsea. The authorities have been unable to locate the relatives of Mrs. Jordan and to-day notified the police that they would like to hear from them at once.

FIND ANOTHER CHARRED BODY.

Another was added to the list of fatalities to-day and a portion of a body was found in the ruins of one of the houses.

Frank P. Mahoney, fifteen years of age, who lived on Crescent street, Chelsea, in trying to escape was knocked down and kicked by a maddened horse which had escaped from a stable. He was taken to the Marine Hospital and died there at noon to-day.

Digging in the ruins on Grove street near Highland street, firemen connected with Ladder No. 1 found the arms and leg bones of a human body. The rest of the body had crumpled into dust. They were left where discovered by the firemen until Dr. Magrath has an opportunity to see them.

NINE KNOWN DEAD.

This makes nine known dead.

Because of the destruction of the overflow pumping station of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Commission in East Boston, the sewerage which this station pumped into the trunk sewer is now being deposited in Chelsea Creek with the result that at low tide, the stench is almost unbearable.

Its effect is shown by the fact that of the large number of new cases of typhoid fever reported to-day, thirteen are in the fourth section of East Boston in which the pumping station was located.

Total number of contributions received by Lee, Higginson & Co., at noon to-day amounted to $95,144 which will be devoted to the relief of the sufferers.

The rainstorm which set in at noon is hindering the work of investigating the ruins.

2,000 Sick and Well Homeless.

According to William E. McClintock, head of the general relief committee, there are 2,000 persons who are absolutely without any means of providing a home. They have been sleeping in schoolhouses, in church pews and in tents. Well and sick have been housed together. Consumptives and those suffering from other diseases are mingling with the healthy.

When this fact was discovered physicians were sent around to make a list of those whose condition rendered it necessary to keep them away from the others and prevent the spread of disease. Some of the consumptives have had places found for them in hospitals, while others, whose cases necessitated attention, have been cared for elsewhere.

DANGER OF PESTILENCE.

When the general relief committee meets with Acting Governor Draper at the State House this afternoon particular attention will be paid to making proper sanitary arrangements for the city and prevent danger of pestilence. The plan now proposed is to provide a large number of portable houses which can be at once erected in Chelsea.

A large number of women were engaged in the work of going over the ruins today. Some of them have reported relatives and friends as missing and were anxious to investigate for themselves the

AMERICAN BEAT ALL ITS RIVALS

The BOSTON AMERICAN'S Final Baseball Edition captured the town!

Ten minutes after the close of the first game of the season yesterday, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S Final Baseball Edition was being sold by thousands at every downtown point in Boston.

It was the fastest distribution of newspapers on record. All rivals, with their belated so-called baseball editions, with incomplete accounts of the game, were left behind in the rush of the public to buy the AMERICAN. Within forty-five minutes after the close of the game, the AMERICAN'S Baseball Edition, with a complete account of the game, play by play, was being sold at West Somerville, North Cambridge, Fields Corner, Mount Bowdoin and other distant parts of Greater Boston.

The game at the Huntington avenue grounds ended at 36 minutes past 4 o'clock. At 4:37 the great presses of the AMERICAN began turning out the complete final baseball edition at the rate of 2,500 papers each minute. At 4:37½ scores of newsboys were selling the AMERICAN on Summer street. In the meantime the AMERICAN'S four Winton automobiles and thirty-five delivery wagons were rushing AMERICANS to other parts of the city.

Within ten minutes after the close of the baseball game every downtown point was covered, and thousands of baseball editions of the BOSTON AMERICAN were being sold. They contained a complete account of the first Boston game, every play made, as well as the score by innings.

Not alone was downtown Boston covered by the AMERICAN. At convenient points about the outer edge of the city the AMERICAN'S wagons had been awaiting the arrival of the automobiles. Papers were quickly transferred at these distributing points, and rushed to distant parts of Greater Boston. By 5:21 p. m., forty-five minutes after the close of the game, the AMERICAN was being sold at Mount Bowdoin, Grove Hall, West Somerville, North Cambridge, Fields Corner and Harvard square.

It was a sad day for the BOSTON AMERICAN'S competitors. When the other so-called baseball editions arrived at the South Station, the BOSTON AMERICAN boys had been on the ground ten minutes, and fresh supplies of papers were being called for. At the North Station the AMERICAN was twelve minutes ahead of all other papers.

At Park street and the Common the homeward bound crowds had been buying the AMERICAN seventeen minutes before any other newspapers arrived with their incomplete accounts. In South Boston the AMERICAN was on the ground thirty minutes ahead of other papers, which arrived after the crowds awaiting news of the game had bought the AMERICAN and gone home.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN WAS THE ONLY PAPER TO HAVE BASEBALL EDITIONS FOR SALE AT THE BASEBALL GROUNDS.

As the great crowd was pouring out of the grounds they were met by the AMERICAN'S Baseball Edition with the complete account of the game, play by play, inning by inning.

The AMERICAN sold by the thousands. It was the talk of the town, this record-breaking distribution yesterday, and the despair of the other papers. It was simply the twentieth century way of distributing Boston's Twentieth Century newspaper for the benefit of its readers.

The AMERICAN'S Baseball Extra Edition alone was bought by 70,000 persons yesterday. If you want all the news of the day, as well as the complete account of the day's baseball game, buy the BOSTON AMERICAN'S BASEBALL EXTRA, issued each day at the close of the game.

CONNORS OUT OF CONTEST FOR DENVER HONOR

Bryan Men Also Surrender for Sake of Harmony in New York.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Announcement was made at the headquarters of Chairman William J. Connors of the Democratic State Committee to-day that in the interests of harmony, Chairman Connors had eliminated himself as one of the delegates-at-large to the Denver Convention. The slate to be presented to the State Convention was announced as follows:

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany; Lewis Nixon, Judge Alton B. Parker and some German Democrat. The name of Herman Ridder, editor of the New York Staats Zeitung, was mentioned in this connection.

The alternate delegates-at-large decided on are George H. Thatcher of Albany, Francis Burton Harrison, New York; W. H. Kirk of Syracuse, and James Schwartzenbach of Steuben county.

Nathan Strauss of New York, it was announced, had been decided on as one of the presidential electors at large.

The Bryan men, who have been advocating the adoption of a resolution favoring his candidacy, surrendered after their defeat before the rules committee. Augustus Thomas, a close friend of the Nebraskan, announced the surrender in the following statement:

"Mr. Bryan's friends, after a general view of the field and the conditions, have decided that there is already such a lack of harmony in the convention, owing to the rifts there, that they are unwilling to introduce another on which there might be a division, even when that question is one so amiable as whether delegates should be instructed or not."

Mr. Thomas denied that the Bryan men had been induced to take this stand by receipt of messages from the Nebraskan. Despite his denial, however, there was a report about the hotel that Mr. Bryan had sent a message calling off his followers.

GIRL SINGS FOR CZARINA.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 15.—Miss Lucille Marcel of New York, soprano of the Opera Comique of Paris, sang before the Empress to-day at Tsarskoe-Selo. Miss Marcel is going soon to England and will sing in London and elsewhere.

HUGE MOUNTAIN FLOOD SWEEPS AWAY TOWN

GREAT FALLS, Mont., April 15.—A great flood is rushing down upon this city, caused by the breaking of the Great Hauser Lake dam on the Missouri River. The town of Craig, lying directly in the path of the uncontrollable volume of water, is reported wiped off the map. The 400 inhabitants, it is thought, escaped, having had warning of the approach of the flood.

The population of this place is 15,000. All living in the valleys are fleeing to the mountain sides for safety. The Boston and Montana smelter, one of the largest in the world, is thought to be doomed.

The 1,500 men employed there worked all night constructing a wing dam, but the works, being located on the river bank, are directly in the path of the flood, and the weak earthworks will be of little avail in saving them.

Suffer on Mountain Sides.

The town of Cascade, four hundred population, north of Craig, is under water and is in danger of being entirely swept away.

Undoubtedly there has been loss of life and the peril is becoming greater every hour.

The river is thickly strewn with the debris of ranch houses and the carcasses of drowned cattle. That cattle were drowned is an indication that the flood caught the people upstream unawares and there was no time to drive them to safety.

As a last resort the dam at Great Falls, from which the smelter receives its power, will be dynamited so as to let the water down stream and make room for the flood rushing in this direction.

Cowboys Spread Alarm.

The Great Hauser dam is in a mountainous region and there is no room for the spread of water. Spring freshets and the melting snow taxed the dam to its greatest strength. A break was discovered yesterday, and efforts were immediately made to repair it. The water broke through with a mighty roar, and the men on the structure had barely time to escape. It is not known whether all of them reached safety.

The great body of water, backed up for miles, leaped through the break, and raced down the valley, growing in volume every minute. Ranchmen raced ahead, warning the people in the path of the flood of their danger and urging them to escape to the hills. There was no time to save property.

People who last night fled to the mountain sides suffered greatly from exposure. The night was cold and many families were entirely without shelter.

CHANCES ARE POOR FOR BASEBALL HERE TO-DAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, April 15.—Things were decidedly different on the links to-day when the Red Sox lined up against the Washington team for the second ball game of the season. There was no brass band; there was no overflow crowd, and there were no mayors and lieutenant-governors to grace the occasion. But the died-in-the-wool fans were on hand and they were all glad that the opening day festivities were things of the past. They felt that they could now sit back and see a good game of ball without being crowded out by a lot of men who see only about five games a year.

It was the weather that gave them more concern, as the showers, which began at noon, threatened to prevent the game.

You would think Cantillon was managing a pennant-winning team to hear him talk. "We would have won that first game except for a couple of battery errors," said the pudgy manager. "We will win to-day's game and every other game we play here. Our team has got this Boston bunch beaten three ways from the Jack."

Those who heard these remarks were inclined to let old Joe rave. He means well and has many friends.

Deacon McGuire smiled patronizingly when he heard what Cantillon intended doing to the Red Sox from now on. "Joe is a hard loser," said the Deacon, "and although he is a good friend of mine we will keep on trying to put his club on the fritz."

REPRODUCTION OF THE FAMOUS PAINTING "THE QUARREL" IN COLORS FREE WITH NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

SYNAGOGUE SHELTERS 400 HOMELESS JEWS

DESTITUTE MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN CROWD BUILDINGS ON BALDWIN PLACE.

Baldwin Place Synagogue and Baldwin Place Hebrew Children's School are to-day the haven of refuge for over 400 men, women and children who last Sunday afternoon and night were compelled to flee for their lives from Chelsea when the storm of fire swept over that fair city.

To-day the 400 poverty-stricken Hebrews are preparing to enter upon the season of the feast of the Passover, which begins to-night at sundown. Crouched upon spare mattresses, hugging their almost naked children to their breasts, more than a score of mothers are lifting their appealing eyes to their Jehovah, dumbly beseeching Him that this calamity pass away and that they be given homes and happiness again.

Need Clothing and Money.

Although the Federated Jewish Societies are doing everything possible for these sufferers, they are in need of clothing and money, but most of all, hope. There are scores of fathers and mothers in the Baldwin Place Synagogue who last week looked upon life as fair and full of promise, who to-day wonder how Jehovah had hidden His face from them and permitted their homes to be blotted out and their property swept away.

On every hand are scenes of wretchedness and suffering that wrench the heart. One woman of more than fifty, Mrs. Ethel Levin, had just crossed the ocean last week with two of her children to join her husband, Joseph, who, with two older children, had provided a comfortable home at No. 41 Vail street, Chelsea. She had waited two years for the home in this free land to be made ready, and the father and his two comely daughters, Bertha and Ida, had made ready for their coming. Now they are all homeless, and the father, who is a painter by trade, is out of work, to add to their troubles.

In the big hall of the Hebrew Children's School, more than 200 children raced around to-day and played their little games, making a glad heyday of their misfortune, which they are, mercifully, too young to appreciate. They munched their bread and called merrily to each other while their mothers sat huddled together nursing the children who were too small to engage in the sports. It made a picture of merriment that was full of woe.

Family Saved by Fireman.

One of the saddest cases in care of the Baldwin Congregation is that of Mrs. Rachel Ragowitz, who lived with her husband Harry, a painter, at No. 138 Walnut street, Chelsea. When the storm of fire raged fiercest and was even then consuming their home a gallant fire captain rushed into the house and carried Mrs. Ragowitz and her twin babies to places of safety and then rushed back and rescued her three other little ones. She was so dazed that she doesn't know the name of that hero.

"My husband is a ladies' tailor," she said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "He is out looking for work now. I don't know what we're to do for our home and all of our goods are burned. I have little Bennie and Jennie, my twins, who are six months old, to care for. Then there is Mamie, three; Meyer, six, and Harry, seven. I don't know what we will do. My man cannot get work and he is downhearted. It is awful, awful."

And this sad story was but echoed and re-echoed from all the others. They are being abundantly fed and the five long tables in the first floor of the synagogue are filled three times daily with a hopeless and hungry throng. The cooking is done in the basement of the church, where a large staff of volunteer aids prepares the food and cares for the wants of their hundreds of charges.

Moss Is Superintendent.

Abraham Moss is acting as superintendent of the Baldwin place relief work, while Charles Port, a young merchant in business at No. 21 Morrow street, is actively assisting him.

Must Start All Over Again.

Abraham and Minnie Levin, who with their one-year-old baby girl, Fanny, had just furnished a fine home at No. 150 Spruce street, were huddled together in a corner of the schoolroom. "We were just getting started in life," said the pretty young wife, "but now we have it all to do over again. My husband is a painter, but he isn't able to get any work yet, and I don't know what we will do."

Rafel Spechter, his wife, Ida, a pretty Jewess, with their two children, Ida, four months, and Paula, four years, are among the refugees. They lived until Sunday morning at No. 80 Poplar street. Then the fire burned them out and they slept all night on Bellingham Hill and since then in the Baldwin Place School. On Monday Rafel, who had worked at the Revere Rubber Company, reported for duty, and then a second calamity fell—there was no work for him.

Mrs. Ida Ochenick, who has two children, a boy of two and a girl of four, and whose husband is in far-away Russia now, lost her home at No. 94 Arlington street. She is utterly destitute and unable to earn a cent for the care of her little ones.

Rosa Libman, eighteen and very pretty, and her brother Joseph, fourteen, are stranded among the fire-made derelicts, for her father was hurt in the fire and is in a hospital and her mother is in Europe.

And so it goes. Each one of the seventy-five or more families had its own tale of woe differing but little from those of the rest.

But the stricken Hebrews are all looking up to Jehovah. They trust Him even in this hour of black misfortune, and each morning the house of prayer has been filled with the worshippers. The Federated Jewish Charities has provided many huge boxes full of "Matzo," or unleavened bread, for the feast of the Passover, which lasts for eight days from to-night. Every one of the stricken souls is preparing to observe the Passover as never before.

HOMELESS BY GREAT FIRE; CRY FOR AID

ruins in the hopes that they might be able to find some traces of them.

Abandon Use of Passes.

It was decided to abandon the use of passes this afternoon, and people are at liberty to go where they will anywhere in the burned district. The militia detail was cut down to two companies, and these will be withdrawn within the next day or two.

Because of the rumor which was circulated that the members of the companies were pilfering various valuable articles from the ruins, Colonel Sweetser was constrained to issue the following order:

"Officers will be held strictly accountable for the safety of all private property within their districts and will allow no one to disturb or carry away any private property from the ruins without a permit signed by Herbert W. Stebbins or upon orders from the proper authorities. Enlisted men will not leave the street to trespass upon private property except to save it from loss and then turn it over at once to their company commander. Lieutenant Williams, assistant surgeon, will make an inspection of the sanitary conditions and report these conditions to the headquarters in the courthouse."

Tear Down Walls and Chimneys.

Under the direction of Walter Batchelder, superintendent of buildings, standing walls and chimneys are being torn down. Many of the walls are being blown down by a high wind, similar to that of Sunday, when the fire was at its height, which is sweeping over the burned territory, making it hazardous for the workmen.

Plans are being mapped out by the Catholic clergy of the city for services on Sunday. It is their intention to hold two Masses, one at 8 o'clock and the other at 10 o'clock, in the Scenic Temple, the Webster avenue school, and the old parish house on Crescent avenue. Polish Masses will be held at 7 and 11 o'clock.

Mr. J. R. Fernald of Chestnut street was engaged in a search for the remains of Mrs. Fernald, who, with two women friends, was seen sitting in a bay window when the fire swept up to the house. It is feared that there were many caught by the flames. Work is being impeded somewhat on account of the heat, which still prevails in the ruins.

Superintendent of Streets James A. O'Brien started out to-day with 1,000 laborers to clear up the debris on the principal streets.

PESTILENCE PERIL NOW CHELSEA'S FEAR

Following on the heels of the ruin and desolation caused by the big Chelsea fire comes the fear of an epidemic of dread diseases. The flames leaped across to East Boston and destroyed the overflow pumping station of the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission.

As the result of the destruction of the station the sewage of portions of sixteen cities and towns is not going into the trunk sewer to be carried far down the harbor.

At low tide, when the flats in Chelsea Creek are bare, the stench from the sewage which has not been carried away is such that the State and cities boards of health urged on the metropolitan commission the necessity of getting relief at once.

RUSH REPAIRS DAY AND NIGHT

The commission has put three shifts of laborers and engineers at work, with orders to rush the repairs to the system day and night. Residents of the Fourth Section of East Boston fear typhoid from the failure to get rid of the standing refuse. This disease was prevalent in Boston before the fire, and the new menace, citizens declare, will add to the great danger.

It is expected that at least eight days will be required to remedy the dangerous conditions.

Secretary Davenport of the metropolitan commission to-day said that while there was an overflow of sewage, more than half was being carried to Deer Island and pumped into deep water. He had communicated with the Board of Health and every effort was being made to have the station put in immediate working order.

The cities and towns whose sewage was taken care of by the East Boston station and pumped into the trunk sewer are Arlington, Belmont, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Lexington, Malden, Medford, Revere, Melrose, Somerville, Stoneham, Wakefield, Winchester, Winthrop, Woburn and parts of Boston.

In a new bulletin issued to-day the Massachusetts Chelsea relief committee makes announcement of its new headquarters and the various stations that have been established to care for the needs of the fire sufferers.

Fresh fires broke out to-day among the ruins. While careful watch was kept on them by the militia and firemen, there was so little left to burn that they failed to cause much anxiety. Fanned by a southwest gale, the flames at times burst up to a considerable height.

The greatest menace discovered by the guards around the burned district to-day was the walls of the large buildings which remained standing. The gale was severe enough to threaten to topple them over at any minute.

It was found necessary to order those who had permission to enter the burned district away from many of the sections where the walls were particularly dangerous. In some cases permission to enter the dangerous streets was refused.

Some thirty expert safe openers appeared in the city to-day armed with all the necessary tools to open any safe that had resisted the fire. Under the direction of the police and military they set to work prying the steel doors apart. In many cases they found the contents intact.

Long lines of applicants for clothing and bedding assembled in front of the various relief stations to-day to file their applications. As fast as they could be verified by the committee's investigators wagons were sent around with the required articles.

Mayor Beck announced himself to-day as pleased with the situation. He said that everything was moving smoothly: that there had been no disorder reported anywhere during the night, and he thought that the various committees had matters well in hand and were doing everything in their power to relieve any distress. City Solicitor Harry W. James has become the Mayor's secretary and established headquarters at the high school. An official bureau of information will be opened within a few days.

PAY OFF BANK DEPOSITORS.

The Chelsea Trust Company in its new quarters near the police station commenced the work of paying off depositors this morning. Twenty extra clerks were put at work, and as fast as accounts were verified the depositors were paid.

Passover food was given out by the Young Men's Hebrew Association at the rooms on Winnisimmet street. At 9 o'clock 1,500 persons had applied and the line showed no signs of diminishing.

The fire lines are now practically in the control of the police. Only four companies of militia are left, D and I of the Eighth Regiment, Lynn; the Fifth Company of Coast Artillery and E Company of the Fifth. They will be withdrawn as soon as it is seen that there is no more need of their services.

SIGHTSEERS CROWD CARS.

Crowds of sightseers were carried through the burned district on electric cars to-day. None of the cars was permitted to stop, but the crowds got a good look at the situation.

Among the plans for helping out which have been started is that of the Y. M. C. A. of Chelsea. They have erected a big tent on the common and managed to secure a consignment of lumber to-day with which to erect a structure which will be kept open all Summer and will accommodate 800 young men. An employment office, lunch counter and reading room will be opened. It is in charge of General Secretary C. H. Potter.

Boston Aerie No. 45, Fraternal Order of Eagles, has sent a check for $100 to the Chelsea Aerie toward the relief of members, with the suggestion that other aeries may respond later.

HOMELESS CRY FOR AID; HOUSEHOLD GOODS REQUIRED

Generous people have responded liberally to the appeal for funds, but the $100,000 now on hand will only go toward relieving immediate want in Chelsea. When it is figured that the loss in all probability reached close to $10,000,000, it will be seen that the relief fund is not so large as it might be. That will shortly be swallowed up in purchasing actual necessities.

There is danger also that the health of women and children will suffer from the effects of sleeping in such buildings as had been provided for them. The nights have been cold, and while there have been hundreds of blankets distributed even these have been insufficient protection.

In the midst of it all there is still the anxiety of hundreds regarding relatives and friends whom they have not been able to locate and fear they may have been caught in the flames which destroyed their homes.

Search is being renewed to-day in the ruins for bodies of additional fire victims. It is believed that the list of dead will be enlarged, perhaps considerably, as there are still a large number of missing and unaccounted for.

It is pointed out that there may have been victims caught in the flames, of whose bodies there would not be a trace left. "A fire which ground brick and stone to powder would easily reduce a human body to vapor," a Chelsea doctor declared to-day.

There have been seven bodies, in all, recovered in the ruins. Many are missing under such conditions that have been practically given up for dead.

Investigating Arson Plot.

The police are following up all clews which point to incendiarism as the origin of the fire, but so far have not succeeded in fastening the crime on any individual.

With daybreak to-day began the labors of the Massachusetts and the Chelsea Relief Commissions. Food and clothing are being distributed, the work of housing the homeless was resumed, and the doctors and nurses were at work in caring for the sick.

DRAFT BILL FOR COMMISSION TO REBUILD CHELSEA

Senator Hall of Revere, chairman of the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, and Attorney-General Malone, are drafting a bill for the appointment of a commission to take charge of the work of reconstructing the burned city of Chelsea and to finance the work. The bill is modelled on the bill passed by the Texas Legislature for the city of Galveston.

The Chelsea bill will provide for a commission of five, consisting of the Mayor and four citizens to be appointed by the Governor. Of the latter at least two will be Chelsea residents. The Galveston commission had five members, including the Mayor, two persons appointed by the Governor and two elected by the voters of the city.

The bill will be presented to the Legislature next week. It will be admitted under a suspension of rules.

ASK RELIEF FOR FIRE SUFFERERS FROM BROOKLINE

The citizens of Brookline contributed $1,400 for the sufferers of Chelsea at a meeting held in the Town Hall. Large contributions of clothing and many other useful articles are being sent from Brookline in an auto. Circulars in blocks of fifty each are being distributed in all the classes of the public schools in the town, and in this manner the people are being asked for aid. Mrs. James R. Codman, a well-known society woman, is in charge of all the contributions of clothing, and as fast as the parcels are sent to her the things ar sortd out and speedily dispatched to Chelsea.

The entire town of Brookline is being

BOSTON SHOE MEN AND ODD FELLOWS RAISE RELIEF FUND

At a meeting of the New England Shoe & Leather Association, held to-day at their headquarters, No. 166 Essex street, $5,750 was raised for the Chelsea sufferers. It was voted that a circular should be sent to all the members of the trade in Massachusetts, both in and out of the association, asking their aid.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Massachusetts to-day sent out an appeal to the 400 subordinate lodges in the State asking aid for Chelsea. The Grand Lodge has already contributed $500.

DORCHESTER KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS AID CHELSEA SUFFERERS

President Peter F. Hanley of the Knights of Columbus Club, Dorchester, called a special meeting of the organization last night in the clubhouse at the corner of Pearl and Pleasant streets, to form plans for aiding the Chelsea sufferers. The club donated a check of $100. The club consists of members of the following councils: Dorchester, Mt. Vernon, James E. Hayes, Elm Hill and Mt. Bowdoin.

The club will also give a sacred concert on Sunday, April 26, for the benefit of the sufferers. Out of 240 of their order in Chelsea, 169 were burned out.

The Dorchester club will have open doors for the Chelsea Club, and all clothing left at the Dorchester clubhouse will be forwarded to the Chelsea unfortunates.

RELIEVE DISTRESS OF FOUR FAMILIES LIVING IN A BARN

One of the pathetic cases of destitution as the result of the Chelsea fire, which would undoubtedly have existed for days but for the investigation of Meyer Bloomfield of the Civic Service House, was discovered at No. 97 Irving street, Everett.

Here four families rendered homeless by the fire had gathered what little belongings they possessed and carried them to a large barn in the rear of the house, which was tenanted by one of their friends, and had set up temporary quarters.

There were thirteen children among the twenty people who found shelter in the barn. They were clothed in the poorest of garments, all the wearing apparel they saved. For the past two days they had been existing on bread and water, ignorant of the fact that temporary quarters where substantial food could be had for the asking had been established in Chelsea.

The food which they had brought with them and had been sparsely distributed among the children was all gone yesterday and the families were facing starvation when a neighbor notified Mr. Bloomfield of the Civil Service House of their pitiable condition. To add to their misery the two-year-old daughter of one of the families was seriously ill with measles and in sad need of a physician's services.

Get Foodstuffs.

Mr. Pehr and Miss Dora Goldstein of the Civic Service House after an investigation took action at once. From the relief quarters at the Chelsea armory quantities of bread, canned meats, vegetables and milk were secured in addition to a five bushel bag of potatoes and onions. This food was immediately distributed among the needy families, and later, through aid of Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, the children were provided with clothing.

GREAT BENEFIT FOR CHELSEA SUFFERERS ON SUNDAY EVENING

At a meeting of the theatrical managers of Boston playhouses and representatives of the attractions now playing in Boston yesterday afternoon plans were started for a great special performance to be given Sunday evening for the benefit of the Chelsea fire sufferers. It is planned to make this the biggest dramatic and vaudeville performance ever given in the city. B. F. Keith has offered the use of the Boston Theatre, while practically every actor and actress now playing in Boston has offered his or her services for the entertainment. The sale of seats opens at the Boston Theatre, Thursday morning. The committee will have a great array of talent from which to select the program.

VICTIMS HUNT LOST FAMILIES

The Boston Ameriacn Bureau Thronged With Sufferers Who Tell of Want.

PRIVATION AMONG POOR

Tales of suffering, want, hunger, privation, of loss of home and loved ones, and of every other form of anguish to which human flesh and mind of man is subject were tearfully moaned into the ears of those in charge of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S information bureau in Naismith's drug store, at the corner of Second street and Broadway, Chelsea.

The tales were told by those who suffered loss of shelter and sustenance by the conflagration.

A large portion of the population of Chelsea is composed of Hebrews, and the anguish of those unfortunates, without home, food or shelter that they could call their own, and with the Feast of the Passover beginning to-night, is such as to make even the soldiers and police ask what, in particular, is "wrong."

It soon became known among the Hebrews in Chelsea that at the BOSTON AMERICAN'S information bureau could be found a man of their own race who could make plain to them, in their own language, the circumstances and conditions necessary for them to receive the relief of which they stood so much in need. This man is Jacob Polansky of Boston, president of the Congregation Beth Israel, which meets in the Baldwin Place Synagogue. Mr. Polansky gave up all attention to his insurance business in order that he might help the Jewish people of the stricken city to make what preparations they could for the orthodox observance of the Passover. He was kept busy until late last night and during the early hours today.

All day long there is a stream of callers seeking information as to missing friends or to leave their present address so that their friends might know where they are. Many are the instances in which, through the publicity given by the AMERICAN to the new addresses of persons, or to the fact that certain persons are being sought by relatives, friends have been put in communication with one another.

It is noticeable that many persons asked where they could find physicians and it is suggested that the physicians of Chelsea send to the AMERICAN bureau or elsewhere their new address.

Already the Drs. Van Magness, who were at No. 219 Shurtleff street, have established themselves at No. 212 Washington street.

Many telegrams have been received addressed to persons in the devastated district, and these have been turned over to the AMERICAN'S bureau. An attempt is being made to deliver these telegrams to those to whom they are addressed.

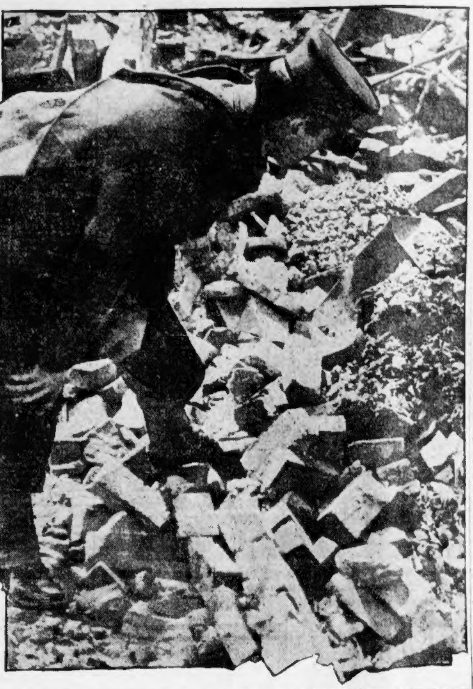
SOLDIER SEEKING FOR BODIES IN RUINS OF A CHELSEA HOME



So many people are missing, so startling are the stories of narrow escapes during the fire when the flames hemmed in the people in their flight, that the troops have begun a search of the ruins. The bones of three bodies have already been found. The soldier in the picture discovered the ashes of a human being just before this snap was made.

POPE RULES AS VOID BRIDALS OUT OF CHURCH

CATHOLIC SWEETHEARTS MUST DECLARE ENGAGEMENTS IN WRITING.

ROME, April 15.—Catholic sweethearts must make their engagements in writing after next Sunday. Catholic marriages by a Protestant clergyman or magistrate will be declared invalid by the Pope. Such marriages have always been punishable, but the church considered them binding. They are not even that under the new Catholic law.

The revised betrothal and marriage rules will be read from every Catholic pulpit in the world at Easter and become effective at noon. Speaking of engagements, they say:

"Only those are considered valid which have been contracted in writing signed by both parties and by either the parish priest or the ordinary of the place or at least by two witnesses."

"Private engagements" are referred to as an incitement to sin and causing the deception of inexperienced girls, and afterward giving rise to inextricable dissensions and disputes."

Written engagements are not made absolutely obligatory, but it is specified that only such will be "considered valid and produce canonical effects."

"Only those marriages are valid," says the papal mandate, "which are contracted before the parish priest or by the ordinary of the place, or by a priest designated by either of these, and at least two witnesses."

Severe Penalties.

The marriage must be by or with the consent of the priest of the parish in which either the bride, the bridegroom or both have lived for at least a month.

If neither party has a fixed abode the marriage may not be performed at all, except upon permission of the priest's superior.

Elaborate provision is made for registration of marriages and severe ecclesiastical penalties are provided for priests who violate any of the rules.

The regulations apply even to Catholics who are under excommunication or have left the church, but not to those who are not nor have been members of the church.

MOROS KILL 2 IN FIGHT WITH CONSTABULARY

Battle With Outlaws in the Island of Mindanao Is Reported.

MANILA, April 15.—Two members of the constabulary were killed and three soldiers wounded in a fight of the constabulary and regulars with Moro outlaws in the Island of Mindanao, according to messages received here. The news comes in a private dispatch.

The battle is reported to have taken place near the town of Lanao. A column composed of constabulary and a battalion of the Eighteenth Infantry, commanded by Colonel Davis, has been following a band of outlaws for some time. It is supposed here the soldiers overtook the Moros and engaged them. No mention of casualties among the outlaws is made in the message received.

CALIFORNIA GREETS FLEET WITH GAY FETE

5,000 Jackies Are Ashore for Reception Parade at San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 15.—Five thousand men aboard the battleships which are anchored in the bay came ashore to-day for the parade, marking the arrival of the fighting ships in home waters and the formal welcome by Californians.

This is the largest number of sailors ever landed from battleships on the Pacific coast.

The city is so crowded that the police had difficulty in clearing the route of the parade. It is estimated that the population of 45,000 has been more than doubled. Last evening it was discovered there were not sufficient hotel accommodations. Soon a tent city was reared on Coronado Beach to accommodate the overflow.

This afternoon the cecemony of extending the freedom of the city took place. Rear Admiral Thomas received the silver and olive wood casket containing the jewel-mounted golden key to the city.

This gift is from the local war veterans. From now on the days and nights will be taken up with banquets, balls, fireworks, displays, regattas, sports on land and water, prize ring contests, and at Tra Juano, just of the border, a bull fight.

TWIRLER'S WIFE SUES PULLMAN

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15.—Suit has been filed against the Pullman company for $500 by Mrs. J. D. Chesbro. It is stated that Mrs. Chesbro, while en route to New York with her husband, "Spitball" Jack Chesbro, who has been with the New York Highlanders in practice at Atlanta, lost a diamond brooch on the Pullman car.

Mrs. Chesbro alleges that when she retired in the sleeper she placed her brooch in a chatelaine bag which was put into her suit case, and that she shoved the case under the seat after the berth was made down. The next morning, when she opened her suit case, the brooch had been extracted from the chatelaine bag.

LETTER THEFT CHARGED TO MRS. M'KEE

Damaging Missives Written by Her Stolen from Husband, Declares Labori.

PARIS, April 15.—Mrs. Hart McKee was accused in court to-day of having caused the theft of a batch of damaging letters bearing her signature from her husband's room in the Hotel Castiglione.

Maitre Labori, who made the charge, admitted that the letters' disappearance had crippled McKee in fighting his wife's petition for a divorce and in supporting his counter demand for a decree.

McKee has, to be sure, what he says are copies of the letters. They purport to have been written by Mrs. McKee, both before and after marriage. The ante-nuptial correspondence was introduced with a view to show that Mrs. McKee wrote unbecomingly for a woman not yet matrimonially united to the man she addressed.

The letters following the marriage were represented as bearing out the husband's contention that his wife was kindly and generously treated by her husband, but was herself guilty of astonishing extravagance and far from fond of her husband after winning him.

Mrs. McKee's contention, through her counsel, Maitre Barboux, is that McKee himself wrote the supposed copies "out of his own head." She admitted that he induced her to copy some, at least, of his drafts.

Labori contended in his address at to-day's hearing of the divorce trial that McKee had the "originals" in his room until March 28, when they disappeared. He asserted that Anna Bareau, a nurse maid, stole them in Mrs. McKee's interest.

Maitre Labori's address concluded the arguments and an adjournment of the McKee case was taken for three weeks, when the government general-advocate will speak on technical points.

ITCHING HUMOR ON LITTLE BOY

His Hands were a Solid Mass, and Disease Spread All Over His Body —In Four Days the Child was Entirely Cured—Mother Strongly

RECOMMENDS CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"One day we noticed that our little boy was all broken out with itching sores. We first noticed it on his little hands. His hands were not as bad then, and we didn't think anything serious would result. But the next day we heard of the Cuticura Remedies being so good for itching sores, etc., that I thought I would get them. By this time the disease had spread all over his body, and his hands were nothing but a solid mass of this itching disease. I went to the drug store and purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, and that night I stripped my little boy and took the Cuticura Soap and lukewarm water and washed him well. Then I dried him with a soft bath towel, and took the Cuticura Ointment and rubbed him thoroughly with it. I did this every evening before I put him to bed and in three or four nights he was entirely cured. You have my permission to publish this because anybody who suffered as my baby did ought to know of the Cuticura Remedies. I will surely and gladly recommend the Cuticura Remedies, for they are a godsend to all suffering with skin diseases. Mrs. Frank Donahue, 208 Fremont St. Kokomo, Ind., Sept. 16, 1907."

TROOPS ROUTED STRIKE RIOTERS RULE CHESTER

Car Barns Mobbed and Threats Are Made to Dynamite Trolleys.

TRAINS ARE ALSO HELD UP

CHESTER, Pa., April 15.—Following the withdrawal of the detail of State Constabulary, which was mobbed by rioting citizens after a general strike had been ordered on the main line and divisions of the Chester Traction Company, Chester was thrown into an armed camp by the determination of the trolley car officials to run cars to-day on schedule time, aided by police protection from the borough.

This ultimatum, when it leaked about the city, once more inflamed the rioters. The riots and clashes of Monday night, when the State troops were stormed and finally had to withdraw from their post in front of the car barn to prevent bloodshed were continued with renewed vigor.

One hundred officers have been deputized by Mayor Johnson and Chief of Police Pennington to act in conjunction with the police force. Threats that the cars will be dynamited were made on all sides.

Rioting began early in the day. A fire, which caused a loss of $2,500, was started by the mob with the object of burning down the barns.

At daybreak no less than 1,000 men and boys gathered in the vicinity of the barns. Three hours later the mob had swelled until the streets were choked. The police maintained an attitude of indifference.

A train pulled into the B. & O. depot and in a twinkling the mob about the car barn which is less than a square from the depot, took up the cry, and a rush to the station was on.

The mob of hundreds jammed into the station and rushed wildly through the train searching for the strike breakers. They found none. Another train was held up just outside the city and searched.

FAMILY FLEE FROM FIRE IN NIGHT CLOTHES

Fire in the one and a half wooden dwelling at No. 126 Brook avenue, Quincy, occupied by Thomas Kiernan and family caused a loss of over $700 early to-day and drove the family to the street in their night clothes.

The fire was discovered shortly before five o'clock, when Kiernan, his wife and two children were all abed. The fire had made such headway that the family had barely time to get out, so saved nothing.

It is believed that the fire had been smouldering between the partitions since yesterday afternoon when a small fire caused by a cigarette broke out and was supposedly extinguished by the family.

JAIL BALLOT BOX STUFFER IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 15.—Frank Duffy, better known as "Red" Duffy, ballot box stuffer, was sentenced and sent to prison by Judge Rosalsky in the Court of General Sessions to-day under indeterminate sentence for not less than two years and three months and not more than four years and three months.

BAKER'S BROTHER TAKES STAND TO-DAY

TELLS OF THE DEAD CLUBMAN'S LIFE—EXPECT TESTIMONY WILL BE SENSATIONAL.

In his effort to break the will of his brother, Walter Farnsworth Baker, the rich Boston clubman who died of arsenic poisoning at the home of Frank H. Hurd in Bogota, N. J., last October, Edward F. Baker of Commonwealth avenue is on the witness stand to-day in Probate Court. He will tell what he knows of his brother's life and it is expected that his testimony will be sensational in the extreme.

Only two witnesses in favor of the will, which left one-third of a $430,000 estate to four-year-old Natalie Hurd, now dead, and one-third to Harvard college, were heard. They were Miss Mary Maude Munn and Mrs. Natalie Young, the fair divorced sister of Mrs. Hurd.

Not There When His Mother Died.

During the cross-examination she was asked: "Do you know that while his mother was dying in Boston, Walter Baker persisted in staying in New York and vicinity and refused to come home?"

"No, I did not know," replied Mrs. Young.

"Did you know he came home drunk the morning after his mother's death."

"No, I did not."

"Didn't you refer to Baker as a 'dear boy' and a 'nice boy?'

"I may have," she replied.

"Didn't you say to the undertaker that Baker was 'the dearest boy that ever lived?' "

"I might have said it. I often speak of people I like that way."

Gave Mrs. Hurd a Gold Purse.

"Did Mr. Hurd make any objection to Walter Baker giving his wife valuable presents such as the gold purse you have spoken of?"

"No, he did not object," she said.

"When you and Mr. and Mrs. Hurd arrived at the Baker home in Boston to attend Mrs. Baker's funeral wasn't one of the first questions asked by Mr. Hurd after you got in the house 'How much champagne is there in the house?' "

"I did not hear him say that."

"Wasn't there a carousal at the Commonwealth avenue home of Mrs. Baker on the night of the day following her death, during which a great deal of liquor was consumed?"

"Not that I know of."

"Were not Miss Cummings and another nurse asked to come down stairs and partake of liquor that night?"

"Not that I know of," she said.

Following Mrs. Young's cross-examination Malcolm R. Lawrence of No. 120 Broadway, New York, attorney for the Hurds and Mrs. Young was placed on the stand by counsel for Edward Baker. He was questioned in detail about statements which Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young made to three Pinkerton detectives in his office in the presence of a stenographer on October 29, two days after Baker's death. These statements will be offered later for the purpose of trying to contradict some of Mrs. Young's statements made on the stand in Boston.

'Phoned Lawyer After Baker's Death.

Mr. Lawrence admitted that a few hours after Baker's death Hurd telephoned him and told him the details but denied that Hurd did so for the purpose of consulting him professionally.

"Why did Hurd call you up the morning Baker died if it was not for the purpose of consulting with counsel?"

"He called me up for the purpose of telling me that Mrs. Hurd could not keep an appointment with me because of Baker's sudden death that morning. Then he told me the details."

"Didn't you give Mr. Hurd or Mrs. Hurd some advice that morning?"

"They asked me about taking Mr. Baker's keys back to Boston and I told them it would be all right to do so."

URGE NEW SCHOOL FOR THE WAYWARD

The State Board of Charity to-day submitted to the Legislature a report of an investigation as to the advisability of establishing an industrial school for boys who are excluded by age limit from the Lyman School for Boys. The report recommends the establishment of such a school, pointing out that during the last year alone, on the estimate of judges of the courts, over seventy-five boys have been allowed to remain at large and over fifty have been committed to the Concord Reformatory, all of whom would have been committed to an intermediate school had such an institution been established.

The board recommends the purchase of a plot of nearly 400 acres in Charlton.

BOSTON CITY CLUB TO DISCUSS BIGGER CITY

On Thursday evening, April 16, Henry C. Long will address the members of the Boston City Club on the subject, "The Upbuilding of Boston," the improving of opportunities now existing, as represented by the merger, terminal facilities and annexation of suburban cities. The important points of his address will be illustrated by lantern slides, and a general discussion will follow. Mr. Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr., will preside.

LONG CHASE FRUITLESS IN MULLINS' CASE

Annie Mullins was not a suicide when she died in Squires Field, Arlington, on Friday evening, March 27, for this fact is now established to the satisfaction of Chief Urquhart and State Officer Byrnes, who have discovered that she was left-handed.

Joe Squires is eliminated also from the suspicion attached to him in this case by the fact that he was away on a fishing trip at the time of the murder and he did not return until April 4.

Chief Urquhart of Arlington and State Officer Byrnes left St. John's for Port aux Basques, now on their way home after completing their investigations in that city and interviewing the relatives of the dead girl and the others connected with the case.

Eleazar Haynes told the local St. John's police that his daughter Florrie, the wife of Joe Squires, had said that Squires had threatened to kill Annie Mullins. Florrie Haynes denied this statement when questioned by the Massachusetts police.

The interviews with the Mullins and Haynes families did not develop anything except that the dead girl was positively left handed and almost certainly did not commit suicide for if she had the wounds found would, almost certainly, have been of a different character.

It was also learned that in her last letter she wrote that she was ill. But more important than this, it was revealed that Squires could not have been in Cambridge or Arlington on the night of the murder because he was at sea on a fishing trip.

Chief Urquhart and State Officer Byrnes are expected in Boston Saturday. Benedict Shanahan, the fisherman, is expected to return from the Grand Banks any day now, and when he arrives he will also be interviewed to ascertain what he knows of Annie Mullins and her friends.

It is now nearly three weeks since the commission of the shocking and mysterious murder of Annie Mullins, and the police have not yet discovered the first particle of evidence tending to promise the solution of the mystery.

RED HAIR GETS GIRLS IN FREE

"I never saw," said Claude Hagen, superintendent of the Boston Hippodrome, "a red-haired girl that was really pretty."

"And I," said Manager Albert R. Rogers, "never saw one that wasn't beautiful. Every red-haired girl that I ever met had at least some claim to loveliness, and to prove my assertion I will admit every red-haired girl free to the Hippodrome next Thursday afternoon.

Out of this discussion, which occurred at Mechanics Building last Sunday, grew the "red-haired girls' matinee," which will take place to-morrow at the Boston Hippodrome. Manager Rogers has agreed to admit free of charge every girl with genuine red hair who presents herself at the box office of the Hippodrome in Mechanics Building to-morrow afternoon. No questions will be asked—all that is necessary is for the girl to have some shade of red hair.

SAVES GOODS; SEEKS OWNERS

WANTED—Claimants for a horse, wagon, piano, sewing machine, carpet and divers household articles.—D. J. Shuchrow, Maverick square, East Boston.

Shuchrow was watching the Chelsea fire Sunday night and managed to rescue a horse and wagon from No. 149 Central avenue, which no one seemed disposed to save. While driving down the avenue a man yelled to him for help in saving goods. Shuchrow obligingly loaded on a piano, sewing machine, carpet and sundry household goods, and then found the owner had disappeared. Shuchrow drove them to his own home for lack of other storage. He thinks the horse and wagon belong to J. M. Donahue. But he has not a ghost of an idea who the furniture owner may be. Having saved these things, Shuchrow now wants owners for them.

A Gentle Dose That Never Needs Increasing

A small dose of harsh physic—salts, castor oil or pills—soon ceases to be effective.

Then you take larger doses. Else you take the physic more frequently.

That is because the physic is irritating.

The bowel lining grows hard, just as the skin becomes calloused by constant irritation.

Calloused bowels can't perform their natural functions. The result is chronic constipation—the need of constant help.

Such physic belongs to an ancient era. Modern physicians have learned its effects and displaced it.

They now help the bowels gently and naturally. They use vegetables instead of minerals.

Cascarets are purely vegetable.

They act just as laxative foods, just as exercise acts on the bowels.

They don't harden the bowels—don't inflame the stomach—because they don't irritate.

One small, sweet dose is always sufficient, unless the bowels are already calloused.

Their use never causes pain.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C C C on every tablet. The box is marked like this:

JULIA MARLOWE SERIOUSLY ILL, REST ORDERED

NEW YORK, April 15.—Miss Julia Marlowe is lying seriously ill at the Plaza Hotel as the result of a nervous breakdown following a season of ten weeks of one-night stands. Her doctors have ordered the Shuberts to cancel all of her engagements for the next fortnight.

Miss Marlowe's physician, Dr. M. Allen Starr, and her attorney, Herbert L. Satterlee, have found it unwise to consult her, for the time being, concerning the introduction of her name in a Boston divorce suit.

"I have been forced to act independently," said Mr. Satterlee today, "but the public may rest assured that no more unwarranted or outrageous assault was ever made upon a good woman's reputation."

PRINCE TAKES POOR GIRL FOR HIS BRIDE

BERLIN, April 15.—Prince Victor von Isembourg of Birstein, a brother of the reigning head of the house of Hesse, has married the daughter of a local doctor near Schloss Schlackerwerth, Bohemia.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, in whose territory Birstein is situated, tried to help matters by giving the newly married Princess, whose name was Anna Rohrer, the title of Freifrau von Rombach. Nevertheless, the Prince's family refuses to receive his wife.

D'ABRUZZI TO REPRESENT ITALY AT WASHINGTON

ROME HEARS RUMORS DUKE WILL SUCCEED DES PLANCHES AS AMBASSADOR.

ROME, April 15.—The death of the Count Tornielli and the consequent shift of Italian ambassadors, which leaves open the United States post through the transferring of Baron Mayo de Planches to Constantinople, gave rise to the report in Rome to-day that the Duke of the Abruzzi would become the official representative of Italy in the United States.

It is not thought in court circles that it would be beneath the dignity of the Duke to accept the appointment, even though he is a distant realtive of the King. His wide travels and his contact with Governmental methods and titled personages in other lands have given him a broadmindedness fully qualifying him to occupy a diplomatic position. The Duke loves the United States. He has spent many years there and has many warm friends there.

Another element whihc enters into the presumed arrangement is the reported engagement of the Duke to Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins.

While Miss Elkins might not object to a residence in Italy in all the luxury that her titled husband's rights would command, his appointment as Ambassador to the United States would enable her to live in her home city, Washington.

Since the Duke's hurried visit to Rome a fortnight ago, there have been many conferences among the royal family. At one of these it was given out that the engagement of the Duke to Miss Elkins had been ratified, but so reticent has been every one that there has been on definite nouncement of the real status of affairs.

RECEIVER FOR LONDON TUBE IS APPOINTED

LONDON, April 15.—Managing Director Sir George Gibb of the London Underground Electric Railways, was appointed receiver of the company to-day. Speyer Brothers were the applicants for the receiversaip.

It is understood Speyer Brothers' action was due to the fear that the London and Westminster Bank contemplated hostile action against the corporation as the result of its reorganization. Such a move would have probably compelled suspension of work on the power houses and paralysis of the system's operation.

James Speyer said immediately following the receiver's appointment that the proceedings are entirely friendly. The reorganization plan will shortly be published for the stockholders' approval.

"In the Spring a Young Man's Fancy Lightly Turns to Thoughts of Love"—By Nell Brinkley

He glues one eye to the open knot hole

He climbs violently up the gate and hangs thereon, with his little back humped and his feet braced

And kissing her sweetly on the mouth

LITTLE BILLY is very small and stubby toed, and his nose is like a piece of putty stuck below his eyes. And his nose has seven freckles, and that means Summer comin'!

His pockets run clear to the bag at the knees of his knickers, and he can dig out things endlessly therefrom—pennies, and bits of glass licked clean with his pink tongue and rubbed with his cuff so that he may see the world another color through them; snub-nosed pencils, red and white strings and buttons on the ends of them, to swing around his head; nails, and a little round whistle that you tuck between your teeth and your lips, and then puff out your cheeks mightily and blow, with your eyes serious above, all the time.

If you laugh, that knocks out all the wonder of it, because then you are a grown-up; but if you keep your eyes grave all the time you blow, and never dream of laughing, why, then, no matter how tall and wide you are and how many years you have lived, you are not grown up, and you will find wonder in blowing the round tin whistle.

Wonderful Fancies.

Billy plays hard and fast all day long till his knock-kneed legs grow weary and aching, and then he drags his bow and arrow to his white porch and squats on the top step, and rests his sticky face in his hands, and looks out to the blue sky with those wonderful fancies playing in his eyes that come and go in Kiddies' heads that we grown folks cannot even guess at.

And he's filled with a delicious laziness through all his little body. He licks his fingers with fervent memory in his eyes and around his sucked in lips, and sighs, "Oo, Dolly! I likes it——" and the scarlet of strawberry jam, with a stranded seed or two, still stains the scope of cheek in front of his left ear.

Mercy, but the world is sweet! And the sun lies like a warm pool on his frail baby shoulders.

Through the other funny fancies that drift through his satiny black head he remembers that new folks moved in next door yesterday. He saw a rocking chair go in, with its rockers arching entrancingly in the air and the cane bottom on the man's head. He watched the procession through the knothole in the side fence.

Winks at Him

The knothole winks now at him like a luring eye, across the turf, and little Billy's heart homes to it. And he bumps sweetly on the "seater" of his knickers down his steps and wanders across the sun-flecked shadow-patched bit of lawn.

He hums a delicate little tune to himself, and the fairies must have taught it to him, for no man made it.

His chin is sticky and his red mouth moist, and the front of his jacket from the chin down is glazed with a coating of hardened sweet things gone into sugar, like the frosting on a cake. And he kicks his toes in the short grass.

He glues his one open eye to the knothole, with the other scrutched up and his mouth awry. And ye Gods and Agnes! A little Betty, with a baby blue dress and five pearl buttons down the back and her trousies showing, is sewing the clothes on her doll, which has a face like a chorus girl's, and murmuring over it.

Billy's heart goes from him like a thing with wings, and for a long, a very long time, till his shut eye is tired and his mouth aches, he stands, first on one foot and then on the other, gazing on the wonder within the small circle of the knothole.

And then he wanders absently down along the side of the fence and lingers at the corner another long minute, humming with fine indifference his little fairy tune; and then he jams his putty nose between the pickets and peers long and ardent at the baby-blue-and-pearl-buttons Betty. And she does not see.

So he climbs violently up the gate and hangs thereon, with his little back humped and his feet braced. And he has forgotten his little fairy tune and he boldly explodes a greeting:

"Lo!"

"And she sees him then—golly goodness!—and stands bashfully with her little wrist curved and her doll swinging with twisted legs.

And her knees are knock knees, like his, and her hair is like spun sugar.

And then he loosens the latch and the gate swings in with him, and he laughs charmingly and crinkles up his nose, with its seven freckles—because of the gate swinging in, you know!

"Thoughts of Love."

And a little giggle grows in the baby-blue-and-pearl buttons Betty's eyes, and she wags her skirts and scuffs her shiny slippers in the turf.

And if you came quietly, with a splendid indifference and a fairy tune on your lips, to the knothole a little time after, you would hear murmuring and gentle chatter, and "Now you play—let's play that you——"

And once you would see Billy with ardent sticky face holding the pink face of the baby-blue-and-pearl-buttons Betty between his two spread out little fists and kissing her sweetly on the mouth.

And you would slip away with another little tune in your heart: "In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." NELL BRINKLEY.

The Whining Woman Sees No Fun in Life

By Beatrice Fairfax

COMING in from the country the other day I sat behind a smartly dressed woman of about forty-five.

She had a face that would have been decidedly pretty had it not been for the deep lines of discontent graven on it. Her mouth drooped at the corners; her brow was furrowed by a frown, and her voice—oh, the whining, complaining note in that voice.

She talked with a woman friend and for the twenty miles of the journey the friend was forced to listen to an unending string of complaints.

The whining woman found fault with her husband, bewailing her difficulties in training her children, criticised her neighbors, and ended by saying that she did not see why her servants never stayed any length of time with her.

I saw plainly enough why they did not, and so, I think, did the woman friend.

Husband Dreads Her

HOW that woman's husband must dread going home at night to the inevitable string of complaints that is sure to greet him.

Such a woman gets no pleasure out of life, and gives no pleasure to others. She is a bundle of wrangling, jangling nerves, and her family and friends are obliged to bear the brunt of her moods.

When a woman gets to that state, what she needs is rest, mental and physical.

She should get away from her family, if possible, for their sakes as well as her own.

She need not think that the house will go to pieces in her absence. Things may go somewhat astray—but what if they do?

She has got into the habit of trying to force everybody into her way of thinking, and domineers husband and family to an uncomfortable degree.

She would willingly lay down her life for the sake of any of them, but she thinks nothing of making their lives very unhappy and disturbed.

Destroys Beauty

DISCONTENT can destroy the prettiest face ever created.

And even if your heart is filled with discontent, you have no right to vent your ugly mood on others.

That woman on the train made her friend thoroughly uncomfortable and bored for three-quarters of an hour.

Of one thing you may be very sure, and that is that no one cares to listen to a long list of woes and complaints.

As long as you are cheerful and happy you will be welcomed on all sides, but the moment you become morose people will avoid you.

Try to give your friends the best that is in you. Don't show them your worst side.

Remember always that smiles make more friends than frowns, and that a cheery, kind word is never lost.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

By the Professor

QUINCE SEED FOR CURLING

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Please tell me of something to make my hair stay curly for a long time, something that won't hurt it. Will I have to curl my hair every time I wash it? L. M.

THERE is nothing that will make the hair permanently curly. Anything that you may use will not last through a shampoo. You will have to renew the application. Quince seed is good and harmless. Let the seeds stand in water for a time and then strain and use the liquid for dampening the hair before putting it up in curl kids.

TO MAKE FLESH FIRM

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me how I can make a flabby nose firm and how to remove pimples from the face? C. C. T.

BATHE it with alcohol. This will tend to make the flesh more firm. A few drops of benzoin in the cold water with which you bathe the face will have the same effect. Treatment for pimples has been outlined lately.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A FICKLE GIRL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl and was engaged to a young man about my own age. Since then I have met another young man whom I like better, and do not care any more for the young man I was engaged to. Please tell me what I should do in this embarrassing matter. TROUBLED.

I AM afraid that you do not know your own mind very well. If you do not love the first man break the engagement, but wait a while before accepting the second. How can you know that you will remain in love with him? You might fall in love with the next man who paid you attention.

CERTAINLY NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a man about seven years my senior. He has never showed me any attention at all. He seems to show more attention toward my sister. I would like your advice as to whether I should show my love for him. I am a girl of seventeen. I see him every day. B. R. L.

CERTAINLY not. You say he is attentive to your sister. Surely you do not want to take him away from her and cause her unhappiness. Try to avoid seeing him so often if it makes you unhappy to do so.

Daily Short Story

A Tropic Experience

By Annabel Lee

TWO men were riding along the darkening mountain trail in Ecuador. The foliage dripped and scattered gusts of water across the track beneath and sent up clouds of steam, the aftermath of the deluge of an hour before, blotting out the landscape as completely as if the riders were journeying into the sky.

The tall man—the American—rode forward as if he had not a responsibility in life, with head down and rein held slack.

At least, so thought the Spaniard who rode doggedly behind him, but he could not see the expression on the American's face as he pushed his burro through the gloom, with his hand on his revolver, momentarily alert for the attack which he had expected for the past four hours.

"If," murmured the American, "if Baptiste were not a 'yellow belly,' I could confide in him, but what's the use? He would either die of fright or turn tail and run for the nearest camp and this money must be delivered to-morrow. The Jamaicans are already on a strike in some of the camps, because the pay car did not show up last month, and I've got to deliver the goods, that's all."

Here his reverie was broken off by the Spaniard, who shivered as the plaintive cry of a wildcat fell on the air and he said, "It is necessaire to make much carefulness, Senor Hill, pero no mucho fear for the mula sees all right." "Shut up, Baptiste," growled Paul Hill, "d'ye want everybody to know we are on the trail?"

His companion made no reply, but he sniffed under his breath, "Pig of American."

Had he known that the American carried $30,000 in his saddle bags and that this knowledge was shared by three desperadoes, he would have followed somewhat distant from the paymaster's heels, a fact that Paul Hill knew only too well, and, therefore, kept his confidence to himself.

They were nearing the little camp where the railroad touches the river before climbing the long ascent through the Andes, and Hill's face lighted with relief as he saw a light gleaming in the lean-to shanty that served as commissary and post office and general drinking headquarters. A few minutes later, the sound of galloping hoofs, splashing through the muddy trail, decreased to a walk, then silence.

Hill leaned forward and listened intently to the noise of half-drunken voices that came from the house, his head tilted to one side to catch the faintest sound, before he hailed, "Hello, the house," without dismounting. In a moment there was a scramble and a tall, wiry Jamaican came shuffling out of the house, but he did not speak until he reached the American's side, then, striking the tired pinto's mane, he said significantly: "There are two fresh ponies over at the corral, and you had better go straight through to-night on the upper [illegible]."

A Warning!

The travellers slowly rode over to the corral and Baptiste made off to the cantina for his favorite drink of majorca, and then Benigno, the mulero, whispered as he clutched the saddle, "Here is a letter that the padre left for you about half an hour ago, but don't try to read it here in camp."

Hill grabbed the letter and called to the Spaniard, "Vaminos, Baptiste." Through the open window there came a sharp reply, "I wait for manana, Senor Hill.

But the mulero had been impressed by the padre's call and urged, "Don Baptiste, this is a fine riding animal, and it will not be here in the morning, for the foreman from 'Mile 23' telegraphed for a fresh pony to be held in reserve for him."

"Don't waste any more breath on him, Benigno," sneered Hill, as he turned his back upon the valley and resolutely started up the canyon, applying the spurs until he had rounded the curve and shut out the view of the camp, then halted, suddenly, struck a match and read the note.

"Querido—A friend will meet you on the trail. Listen for the lark's call and answer it, but don't fire. PAQUITA."

Paul Hill turned in his saddle and looked back across the canyon, a look of perplexity on his face. Was this a plot? "No, no," he said aloud, "for I recognize Paquita's writing. But what does she mean?"

His mind leaped to the hacienda, fifty miles distant, where his fiancee, Paquita Arias, lived surrounded by all the watchful care that an overfond father could give and protected by a retinue of servants, the chief of whom was the Indian woman, Leo, the faithful watchdog of her privacy.

"But how could she know of this threatened attack?" he said to himself. Two days of steady riding on fresh horses is apt to change scenery and eye alike, and of no country will you find greater varieties of views than in the mountains of Ecuador. The close and sticky trail had widened to the woodless uplands of the Andes, and the tree line now lay like a smoky pall below him as daylight began to steal over the crags above.

"And still no hold up," he said to himself; however, he glanced with the mountaineer's instinct at every projecting rock, at the turn of the trail, and thanked his stars that the next camp and breakfast were only two hours away. Only an experienced mountaineer, familiar with the trick of getting the best speed out of the animal over a dangerous and uneven trail, could have covered the trail that Hill did in the short space of time.

He made headway by his tactfulness. Now he applied the spurs; now he reined in to a steady walk, and then again to a complete standstill. But always with the one end in view, to get to the end of his journey as quickly as possible. And so before he realized it he was in sight of the mountain metropolis, a settlement of adobes and straw-thatched houses sleeping in the cuplike depression.

"What's That?"

The quick dawn of the tropics had already stirred the inhabitants to action, and he had no sooner dropped the bridle from the head of his pony in front of the general store than he became aware that some excitement hovered over the camp.

In front of the Cuartel there was a curious crowd of hangers-on and the droning voices of the men on guard reached him before he had crossed the plaza. He caught a jest and the coarse chuckling laugh that attended it and then before he could inquire who the prisoners were, the foreman of the bridge gang cried out: "Say, but you are lucky, Hill, they've coppered your road agent."

"What's that?" answered Hill in an incredulous voice.

"The purtiest capture you ever saw," the foreman continued. "And a woman, too, and a young Spanish girl did the job as neat as you please. Talk about your grit, what do you think of that?"

For a minute Hill's heart stood still and he gazed spellbound and unable to stir. This then was the meaning of Paquita's note that the padre delivered.

"The senorita belongs to the quality," the foreman added, "and the old woman who was with her is her body servant, and they came all the way from her father's hacienda, up near Quito, tracking these bandits. And the way it was done! Gee, they could give Sherlock Holmes cards and spades.

"It seems that the Indian woman had been visiting one of those holy wells where the natives make pilgrimages once a year to be cured of rheumatism, and she overheard these fellows talking about holding the paymaster up on his next trip. They were two vanqueros who worked at the hacienda, and it became an easy matter for Leo to watch their movements, especially after confiding to her mistress, who released her from all household duties for that purpose.

"The old girl was out early and late, and one night she carried concealed beneath her reboso a jug of rum pope, which they drank to their undoing. Just before she started for the house they made her promise to bring them some more the next night, that they were going down to Guayaquil and would fetch her some jewelry when they came back. That very morning one of the padras started down the trail, and the senorita said she sent you a warning letter."

"Go on and try to talk faster; it won't hurt you. Cut out the opera and give me the finale," said Hill impatiently.

Speechless!

"Well, to make it short, the young lady sneaked away with the Indian woman when it came time to start on their trail, and they camped out day and night always within sight of the desperadoes waiting like the generals that they proved themselves until they would strike an American camp before showing their hands.

"Last night about 9 o'clock these fellows rode up to the cantina and were drinking at the bar when the Indian woman rode up at a furious gallop, followed at a distance by a slender, dark-haired girl. The boys were all sitting around the place smoking and singing, and as soon as they saw that old girl ride up in that fashion they knew that something was doing, and they had their hands on their guns pronto when she called out sharply in Spanish:

"Arrest these men! They are bandidos, and are going to rob the paymaster." The vaqueros whirled around from the doorway, but I guess there were about seven guns covering them before they could say Jack Robinson, and we marched them over to the Cuartel for safe keeping."

"But where are they now?" Hill asked anxiously.

"In the Cuartel."

"Good God, you don't tell me that you've imprisoned the women, too," Hill exclaimed.

"Well, of all the idiots, the women are now asleep at the Sisters' school and the senorita left word for you to call there just as soon as you arrived. The foreman stopped, and noting the eager expression on his face, said: "By Jove, I did hear that you were engaged to a Spanish girl and I wonder if this is the lady?"

Hill did not answer him, but mounted his pony and started across the plaza for the old convent whose tile roof peeped over the high adobe walls. A moment later he was standing in the reception room talking to the Sister and thanking her for her care of the courageous guests. And then Paquita came into the room. Her eyes fell before his, and he was speechless with admiration.

"Will you," he said, "tell me why you did it, Paquita?"

"I—I did it for you, Pablo," she faltered.

Mothers of Men Who Made History

THE MOTHER OF LONGFELLOW

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

OF greatness there are various degrees. Not all great men are equally great. As one star differeth from another star in glory, so one great man differeth from another great man in greatness.

Longfellow was not great to the extent that Goethe, or Dante, or Shakespeare was; but in consideration of his enormous Heart-Power, and his striking ability along the line of comforting the sorrowing and inspiring the discouraged, the New England poet is well deserving of a place in the Pantheon.

Longfellow was able to sing the songs that helped men to more love and hope, to a kinder regard for one another and to a braver faith in the universe and its laws; and in being able to do this he fairly earned the right to be called "great."

As long as the English language endures his poems will be read with delight and with profit, for, besides being beautiful productions, those poems are the springs at which the spiritually tired and thirsty may find refreshment and strength.

As long as the stars look down upon troubled hearts and perplexed minds, men will lovingly turn to the author of "Evangeline" and the "Psalm of Life" for the consolation without which humanity would perish.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow—born 1807, died 1882—was the son of Stephen and Zelpah (Wadsworth) Longfellow.

Zelpah Wadsworth seems to have been intended by nature for the mother of a poet.

A Puritan of the Puritans, her ancestors having come over in the Mayflower, she had in her soul the sunshine of the South with all of its poetry and dreaminess.

Loving Character

LIKE the waters of Shiloh, she went "softly," rippling rather than raging, making sweet music out of all the hindrances and obstacles that came in her way—a tender, loving, beautiful character, just the kind of woman to bring up a poet of the stamp of Longfellow.

She was a remarkably kind friend and neighbor, a helper of the poor, a comforter of the distressed, a devoted wife and mother.

It is written of Mrs. Longfellow that of her children she was ever the trusted confidante. She shared all their little secrets and joys, soothed all of their little fears and troubles, and with the tact that was as tender as it was admirable, corrected all of their faults.

A great divine once said that "the best God for the little child is its mother." With the right sort of mother, the statement is incontestable.

The little child knows nothing about the metaphysics of religion, and is quite unable to understand the postulates of theology, but it knows all about the love that is enthroned in a mother's heart, the love that takes hold of its hand in the dark, that speaks to it softly in times of trouble, that explains all of its little mysteries and calms all of its little fears.

Such a mother had Longfellow; and to that fact we probably owe the thousand beauties that sparkle throughout the poet's verses.

Had a Poetic Nature

IN Mrs. Longfellow's nature the poetical trend was pronounced. The magnetic side of her temperament was strongly developed. Of music she was passionately fond, and the fine arts appealed to her in a wonderful way.

With Nature, in all of its aspects, she was deeply in love. She was never so happy as when out in the country, face to face with the Old Mother of us all.

She used to declare that the fields and woods had "a wonderful effect in tranquilizing the spirit and in calming any unpleasant emotion." In the city she was forced to live for much of her life, but she never loved it. Her heart was always in the country.

It was this temperament in the mother that made Longfellow, and doubtless the millions in all lands that have been lifted up and inspired by the poet's work are thankful that Zelpah Wadsworth was the woman she was.

GALE AND RAIN SWEEP DOWN ON BOSTON TO-DAY

Weather Bureau Posts Storm Warnings; Light Craft to Stay in Harbor.

COLD WAVE ALSO COMING

A severe wind and rain storm is sweeping down upon Boston and New England from the St. Lawrence valley. By late this afternoon and evening the storm will likely be central over the Northern Atlantic seaboard.

The wind is to increase, according to the weather bureau, to the fury of a gale at a velocity from forty to fifty miles an hour and will be accompanied by driving rains.

Post Storm Warnings.

The following special storm warning was posted at noon to-day by the weather bureau under orders from Washington:

"Northwest storm warnings ordered displayed at 2 p. m. from Delaware Breakwater to New York. Winds will shift to west and northwest, becoming high by Thursday morning."

At 10 o'clock this morning the Boston weather bureau had storm signals set all along the New England coast north of Boston, while this afternoon the signals are being set as far South as the Deleware Breakwater.

Skippers of light craft, particularly sailing craft, are not putting out to sea and will not until the coming gale has spent itself.

Cold Wave Is Coming.

The forecast here for this afternoon and to-night is for rain, high southwest winds. For to-morrow northwest winds, with violence of a gale, and much colder weather are predicted.

The temperature will probably drop to near the freezing point.

The storm at 1 o'clock was central in the St. Lawrence valley. It is fast coming in the southwest direction. Snow was falling in the Lake Superior region. The storm is widespread, extending from the St. Lawrence to Northern Ohio and to the Ohio river valley.

At sea there will be no particular danger, for the gale is expected to be at its worst on the coast. It will not be of such severity as to interfere with ocean-going craft, but fishing schooners and coastwise sailing vessels will be compelled to swing at their moorings until the gale abates.

DISCHARGED, SHOOTS CITY OFFICIAL AND SELF

SUPERINTENDENT OF STREETS OF NORTHAMPTON ATTACKED IN HIS OFFICE.

NORTHAMPTON, April 15.—Angered because he had been discharged for lack of work, John Tracey, a city laborer, shot and probably fatally injured Superintendent of Streets George F. Birge in the latter's office this morning, and then, replacing the revolver in his hip pocket, walked to his home on Franklin street, locked himself in his room, turned the gun upon himself and sent a bullet crashing through the roof of his mouth. Birge died shortly before noon in the Dickinson Hospital. His assailant is also dying.

Birge was attacked while seated at his desk in the small office adjoining the city stables. It was but a few minutes past 7 o'clock and he was preparing to send out a force of men to do street cleaning. Tracey, revolver in hand, walked up to him from behind and tapped him upon the shoulder.

"Good morning, Mr. Birge," Tracey is said to have remarked.

The superintendent turned in his chair and as he did so Tracey drew the revolver and fired. The bullet went through Birge's head. He dropped to the floor.

Tracey walked out of the building, passing several men who were standing on the sidewalk, and went home. Passing through the kitchen, he met his wife. He remarked that he was going upstairs after some clothing. He barred the door, lay down upon the bed and then shot himself. The shot was heard by Mrs. Tracey and their children and they all ran up stairs.

Battering down the door, Mrs. Tracy found her husband unconscious and bleeding, the revolver beside him. She called the police. Tracey was taken quickly to the hospital.

Birge was discovered a few minutes after the shooting and removed to the same hospital. Neither of the men has been able to make a statement.

Birge is forty years old and single. Tracey is forty-five.

INSANE NEGRO ESCAPES FROM STATE ASYLUM

The police of Boston and surrounding cities and towns are searching this afternoon for James Johnson, colored, who escaped last night from the insane department of the State farm at Bridgewater by sawing the bars of his cell, leaving a crude dummy in his cot to thwart suspicion, and sliding down the wall of the institution on a rope made of his bed clothing.

Johnson is not considered dangerous. He comes from the Western Islands. He was removed from Charlestown about a year ago, suffering from the delusion that the world was set against him because of his color. He occupied a second floor cell in the Northeast Ward.

It is not known at what hour Johnson escaped, but his absence was not discovered until morning. Dr. Drew, who is in charge of the insane department, then communicated with the police.

NEW YORK, April 15.—With practically the same betting rules which governed the metropolitan tracks last year, in spite of the strenuous efforts to stop racing by legislation at Albany, the season will open here to-day at Aqueduct Park.

The feature of the card will be the Carter handicap, a race for three-year-olds and upwards, over a seven furlong course. Sixteen horses are entered, and it is expected that they will all face the barrier, as the weather conditions are right for a fast race.

The Bayside Steeplechase, with seven probable starters, should also furnish excitement and the thirty-thousand racing fans that are expected to attend should see some gilt edge sport.

THINKS LOWELL TEAM WILL BE STRONG

LOWELL, April 15.—Manager A. W. Daly of Montpelier, Vt., has taken charge of the Lowell team of the New England League. He predicted a place in the first division for the Lowell team, and said he counted on new material principally to keep the team up in the race.

Players who reported to-day were: A. F. McLane, Hanover, N. H., catcher and outfielder; Edward Ramsay, St. John, N. B., 2b.; Charles McCormick, St. John, N. B., outfielder; Jack Colleton, Monson, Mass., 1b.; L. L. Grow, University of Vermont, outfielder; Frank Dunbar, Rockport, Mass., c.; Lawrence Riley, Waltham, p.; Thomas Stankard, Waltham, outfielder.

Paddy H. Duff of Providence, R. I., has been appointed captain of the team, and he will direct his men from his regular position of catcher. Duff has had considerable experience, and is regarded as a heady and aggressive player.

Lowell's pitchers will be Mathieu, Keniston, Greenville and Wherry.

HAYES ENTERS RUN.

John J. Hayes, of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, who finished third in the Marathon run last year, has entered for the run next Monday. M. J. Ryan, of the same club, who finished twelfth last year, has also entered, as have Gus Vass and William Foster, of New York, and Charles Neary, of Natick.

CHANCE FOR THE BOSTON HORSEMEN

Special to the Boston American.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 15.—Plans have been completed by the Driving Club of Syracuse whereby a "blue ribbon" amateur driving meeting that will attract entries from the horsemen belonging to the driving clubs in Boston, New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Buffalo, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, etc., is to take place in connection with the State Fair here in September, and it is expected to rival the intercity matinees held in years past at Boston, Cleveland and other cities.

Fine trophies in the shape of cups and plate will be offered that will induce a rare field of fast trotters and pacers to take part in the abundance of classes to be listed.

With the prestige of the Syracuse club, the co-operation of the race officials of the State Fair, the auspicious occassion and one of the best tracks in the country, it seems altogether likely that a record-breaking meeting can be arranged, surpassing even the successful amateur racing held at the State Fair three years ago when the patriarchal John Shepherd, C. H. Beiledeu, Walter Farmer and others of Boston, met the pick of the country in several electrifying contests.

The plan of the Syracuse Club is a direct result of the new rule adopted at the recent meeting of the National Trotting Association in New York, allowing amateurs to race their animals at the big meetings without subjecting them to marks. There is always the probability of amateur animals being driven professionally later, so the extension of this privilege is certain to result in some sensational amateur fields in connection with the Grand Circuit meetings this year.

STRIKE TUH IS EXPLAINED

Silk O'Loughlin's "S-t-r-i-k-e, Tuh" takes place in baseball history, along with "King" Gaffney's famous, "Strike, Two-o-o-o-o."

"It has been reported," said O'Loughlin, "that the 'strike, tuh' cry was fathered by a chew of tobacco slipping into my larnyx about the time I was calling a second strike on a batsman, thus causing the guttural sound to come forth.

"Nothing to it. I took my cue from John Gaffney and his 'Strike, Two-o-o-o-o' years ago. I have always had trouble making the spectators distinguish between 'Strike, Two and Strike Three,' for they sound much alike when uttered in a loud tone of voice. I found the solution in Gaffney's cry, but not desiring to copy the 'King,' I dug up a cry of my own—'S-t-r-i-k-e, Tuh' is the result of that invention."

DANE-BOER BOUT MAY 16.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—"Battling" Nelson has signed articles to fight forty-five rounds with "Boer" Unholz before a San Francisco club on the afternoon of May 16, the weight to be 133 pounds. The men are to fight for 50 per cent. of the gate receipts.

BY BILL ROSS.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Pat Donovan's Brooklyn boys feel very badly over their defeat by the Doves, but admit that the Boston Nationals produced a very superior article in the way of baseball. But the Brooklyn outfit say they will show Kelley's men a thing or two this afternoon when the teams meet for the second time at the Washington Park Grounds.

This morning it was predicted that the club from the home of culture was down on the card for a bad drubbing on this day and date. But the Doves took this sort of badinage with cheerful disbelief. But it is one good bet that Brooklyn is going after a victory to-day with every gun cleared for action.

Joe Kelley hadn't decided this morning who would be selected to do the twirling for Boston this afternoon, but the chances are that Cecil Ferguson will be on the firing line. Frank Bowerman will be receiver general, whoever officiates at the slab.

Rucker Taken Out of Box.

Donovan may use either Wilhelm, McIntyre or Pastorious. He took Rucker, who is in the best shape of any of his timber, out of the box yesterday when it looked like sure defeat for his team and sent Bell in to finish the game. Bell's delivery began to be easy for the Doves before the ninth inning was over. He needs a thorough warming up before he will do.

The Brooklyn team was weak around the third sack. Sheehan, the regular, has a lame arm, and only figured in the proceedings when he went to the bat for Rucker in the seventh, and delivered the goods in the shape of a base hit to center, which scored the last run chalked up for Brooklyn.

Alperman played third sack and put it on the bum. In one inning he muffed a foul fly that was as easy as taking a rattle from a baby, and also threw so wild after gathering in a bunt off Bowerman that Frank kept on going until he reached second. Outside of his work, and the muff by Jordan of a ball hit by Ritchey and tossed to first by Pitcher Bell, the Brooklyn team was all to the good in the field. In fact some of Donovan's men made the crowd yell with delight. Lewis handled several hits in stellar style.

There were 20,000 spectators—the biggest throng Washington Park ever held on an opening day—and the scene witnessed when Jordan sent the ball over the right field fence was a spectacle long to be remembered. To say that the multitude went wild simply does not describe it at all. Bates came within three feet of sending the ball over the fence at about the same spot when he stepped to the plate to open the game. If the ball had sailed a yard higher it would have landed in the street. Owing to the grounds rule made necessary by the immense crowd on the field, Johnny only got two sacks for his terrific drive.

Young pitched a much better game than the number of hits made off his delivery would ordinarily indicate. He kept the hits pretty well scattered. But he also kept Bowerman moving like a jack in the box. Sometimes Frank went up into the air after the ball and at others dug it out of the dirt, feet to one side of the plate. The inside work of the Doves in the first inning was as fine as any fan will see in a season. All through the game they worked with pepper. They showed the speed, team work and baseball sense that is indicated by a score of 9 to 3 when both teams broke about even on total hits and errors. And they also had luck. After the game was over the Brooklyn players, management and fans all said that the Doves looked like a real ball team.

If yesterday's game was a sample, it will not be long before all the people from Missouri will be convinced. The bleachers back of first base were crowded by fans from New York, and they rooted hard for Boston. When Dan McGann had to chase the ball into the crowd he found himself in the midst of friends. All the ex-Giants were favorites. When Dahlen did a contortion act to handle the high ball sent down by Bowerman to prevent Lumley from stealing second they gave him a lot of praise that would have filled a hogshead. Bill got the ball, which seemed chartered for centre field, and also the base runner. It was a great play, but Dahlen had to fall on his head and roll over to make it. It was a great day for the Doves at the bat and on the field.

The Harvard baseball nine will play its second game of the season against the Bowdoin team at Soldiers Field this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the Crimson aggregation hopes to atone for its defeat at the hands of the Vermonters last Saturday.

The Harvard team will be handicapped by the absence of Centerfielder Aronson, who was the star of the game last Saturday. He is behind in his studies, and it is feared that he will not be able to play again this Spring. His place will be taken by Kemble.

McCall has not recovered, and his place at the second station will be taken care of by Keefe, while another change in the lineup will be the substitution of Haydock for Waters in right field.

Either Brennan or Hicks will pitch for Harvard, while Files, who is fresh from victories over Brown and Princeton, will represent the visitors on the firing line.

DELEHANTY FOURTH TO BAT BALL OVER FENCE

That beats the record, 18,752 for an opening. Sure, this burg is baseball crazy.

* * *

Pretty good start to have both Hub teams pull down a win at the breakaway. A continuation of the same won't be overlooked.

* * *

"That's the first run in the American League this season," remarked Jim McGuire when Thoney scored in the first and he was right, as the game here began earlier than at other stops on the circuit.

* * *

Joe Cantillon hated to lose and kicked like a mule on every close decision. A little more display of temper and Joseph would have been exiled to the dressing room.

* * *

Jim Delehanty got on the scroll of fame when he clouted the ball over the left field fence for a homer. He is the fourth player to turn the trick.

* * *

It didn't take the fans long to put the stamp of approval on Jack Thoney in spite of one slip up. He gave every evidence of being a ball player from his cleats up.

* * *

Bobby Ganley, the popular Lowell boy, the captain of the Senators, got a nice bunch of silverware from some ardent Spindle City admirers.

* * *

The first thing that Cy sent over the pan was a strike and this pleased the crowd.

* * *

"Give it to him and let him go home," yelled a fan when the head of the presentation party started on a speech a mile long which could not be heard ten feet away from the surrounding bunch of players.

* * *

Jack Thoney, the first up for the locals, got a tumultuous ovation which made him feel at home immediately. He used his head by getting Pitcher Smith in a hole after two strikes by getting a ticket to first.

* * *

Then when Jack took a chance for second and got there on a wild throw, was sacrificed by Lord, and came across on a wild pitch, the ball hitting "his ump," there was some live rooting.

* * *

Laporte was robbed of a hit in the second when McBride pulled down his liner out of the clouds with his glove hand.

* * *

Uncle Cy in his forty-first year had so much steam in his curves that Criger could not hold on to third strikes.

* * *

Bob Unglaub got into the starry play brigade by making a sparkling backward running catch of a difficult foul close to the bleachers.

* * *

"They walked right up and walked right in and walked right out again," blazed the band when the Red Sox ran the Senators out at the bat in the third in jig time.

* * *

All ovations faded into insignificance to the one tendered Uncle Cy when he stepped to the plate for the first time. When Cy cracked out the first single of the game there was even a louder outburst.

* * *

"Every little bit added gives a little bit more," bellowed the band at the end of the third after the Red Sox got their second tally.

* * *

Jim Delehanty had a chance to shine in the sixth with second and third occupied, but the best he could do was a sharp bounder to Cy, but he redeemed himself later.

* * *

Mr. W. G. Byrne, sporting editor of the Arkansas Gazette, who is known throughout the entire South under the soubriquet of "Colonel Bunn," wired his congratulations to President Taylor on the victory over Washington.

* * *

Mr. Laporte made one of those impossible plays you read about once in a decade when he took Clymer's hard rap on the ground to his left and tossed the ball to Unglaub without catching his balance.

MELLODY WILL TRAIN HARD FOR LEWIS

To-day Honey Mellody takes up his training at Dimond Hill for his match with Harry Lewis of Philadelphia at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night, and the has Dave Deshler, the fast Cambridge stepper, with him.

It is about the classiest bout that the club has staged for the members and it will be the first time either one of the star welterweights has been seen in the ring there. Honey still claims the title of his class, and if he can defeat Lewis no one will deny him the privilege of his claims.

Lewis is rated second to none in the country at his weight and ranks among the few of the cleverest.

He has long wanted to get a crack at Mellody, as he has boxed men who have won decisions over Mellody and beaten them. But he never met a gamer boy than the Charlestown lad and he knows what to expect when he faces the combination of slugging and cleverness which has brought Mellody to the front.

The fact that Lewis was wanted badly out on the Coast and that the Armory A. A. secured him goes to show the quality of the bout. His toughest matches with Terry Martin of his own town, the boy whom Honey has the sign on, shows what an exhilarating affair it will be when Lewis clashes with Honey.

GIBBONS HAS HIS HORSES AT READING

Trainer W. F. Gibbons has removed his string of a dozen horses from the Lawrence track to the half-mile one located between Wakefield and Reading, where he will conduct a public stable through the coming season.

About the first real introduction that Boston horsemen had to Gibbons was when he landed the trotting gelding Bert S., 2:15¼, the winner over a fast and big field of starters at Saugus track a few years ago. The talent received a mighty blow by his victory, as Bert S. sold in the auction pools for a few dollars in tickets amounting to several hundred dollars each. Among the patrons Gibbons has at the Reading track are a number of members of the Quannapowitt Driving Club, whose trotters and pacers he will prepare for the matinees held weekly over the Reading course. He also has several richly-bred youngsters that have futurity prospects.

GRAVES HELPS DRIVING CLUB

In order that the newly organized Somerville Driving Club may go right ahead in holding matinees while waiting for the speedway to be completed on the Mystic River Boulevard, between Medford and West Medford, George A. Graves has kindly offered the use of Combination Park free for their use on Saturdays during the season that the park is not leased for field days, etc.

On the Saturdays that the Somerville Driving Club hold races there will be no admission charged at the gate, but a small sum will be taken for seats in the grandstand, which amount will go to Mr. Graves for keeping the track in shape and divers other expenses.

WRESTLING AT HOWARD.

Olga Nelson, who succeeded in staying the fifteen minutes' time limit with Cora Livingston in a wrestling bout at the Howard Monday, will meet the champion again for mat honors at that house.

SANDY WANTS TO BOX.

Sandy Ferguson, who is now training at Philadelphia for a match with Morris Harris in that city April 24, is anxious to box the winner of the Jeannette-Langford bout in this city.

TAILORS' CLEARING HOUSE.

GEORGE'S, GEORGE'S, GEORGE'S,

14 Summer St. Boston. 259 W. 34th St. New York. 101 S. 15th St. Philadelphia.

Established 1879 For the Sale of Merchant Tailors' Uncalled For Garments.

Between high-class tailor-made garments and ordinary ready-made, there is a vast difference. For the making of a coat, the tailor often pays more than the factory allows for the construction of several suits. It is this extra skill and care that give that shapeliness and snap to tailor-made garments. But the tailors make thousands of garments to order and then fail to dispose of them. Some are mistakes in fit; others fail to satisfy very particular customers, and some are ordered and never paid for. Collecting from the tailors all garments left on their hands, acting as THE CLEARING HOUSE for their sale and paying but one-third value for them, we offer at $15, $18, $20, $25, $30 and $35 Spring Suits, Overcoats, Prince Alberts and Full Dress and Tuxedo Suits, which were made to order for $40, $45, $55, $65, $75 and up to $100. Coming from the swell tailors of New York and those of other fashion centres, our garments are of a rich class you will not find elsewhere in Boston. Many are shades and patterns rich and distinctive. Our garments are the very best tailoring America produces, and they come to you at one-third the made to order prices. GEORGE'S TAILOR PARLORS, 14 SUMMER STREET. Near Washington Street. Open Saturday evenings. Largest Dealers in the world in Merchant Tailors' Misfit and Uncalled for Garments.

THE INDEPENDENCE PARTY MARCHING ON

The Independence Party registers a daily and steadfast growth throughout the country.

Strong and brilliant men from the far West and from the individual South have been added within the fortnight to its executive life, and the principles of the organization are permeating all sections of the country to meet the indorsement and adoption of the people who think and hope the best things for the Republic.

Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas and Virginia have recently furnished some representative and notable converts to the real doctrines of Jefferson, and Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota and Missouri have added virile and vigorous recruits to the real creeds of Lincoln.

Wherever the doctrine and mission of the party have been preached the people have evidenced an eager and hungry desire to hear them and to ponder them.

The Independence Party was born with the equipment of success. It was founded in the necessities of the people and in the failure of the elder parties to meet the popular need or to hold the popular respect. It was built in the wisdom of patient and unselfish thinking upon the real problems of government and upon the actual welfare of the people.

And it was not born dumb or voiceless in a world of sound and speech. Nine great daily newspapers are the loyal auxiliaries of its progress into popular understanding and approval.

Two million subscribers, or nearly ten million readers—one-eighth of the American people—are touched by its earnest doctrines every day, and under the battle hymn of this new Republic of righteousness and liberty its cause is marching on.

The Independence Party is no new and impromptu venture into the realm of speculative politics. It is a logical and inevitable evolution from the patient and persistent advocacy of a dozen strenuous years. It has come out of the ceaseless and unwearying battle which its leaders and these newspapers have waged against public corruption and political graft, and for the rights and liberties of the great body of the American people. It is the child of experience and of trial. It is the product of a thousand popular battles waged with high motives and dauntless courage in an almost holy cause.

No man can estimate the thought, the labor, the money and the sacrifices that have been sprinkled freely upon the processes out of which the Independence Party has grown from the folly, the frailty and the failures of the old organizations into its own vigorous mission and its own hopeful life.

Of one thing be assured. It was not born to die until its work is done. The elements that make it, mixed of truth and patriotism and the public need, are set to a mighty mission in the Republic's history, and they are consecrated to the task.

The skies are clear above it, and the horizon glows with duty and with opportunity. The men who march upon its picket lines of to-day will be the heroes and veterans of the victorious to-morrows which are coming on. The sight of one free man will make a thousand free. Every independent citizen multiplies the independent citizens, and the Australian ballot, that liberator of conscience and of judgment, will open the way to the splendid liberty of November.

Divorce Made Easy, Secret and Painless—

If You Happen to Have Seventy or Eighty Millions

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Young Mr. Vanderbilt and his young wife are to be divorced—as the modern scientist pulls teeth—painlessly, noiselessly, swiftly.

There's no especial harm in this. Young Vanderbilt inherited fifty or sixty millions—perhaps more—from a foolish father, and he was condemned in advance to be a foolish man.

He has been inoffensively foolish. His vices, such as they are, have been almost as quiet as his divorce.

He is to be set free to try again, and bestows five millions on the young woman whom he originally married—that appears to be fixed as the regular "union rate" for divorces in the Vanderbilt family.

The interesting question is this: "HOW DOES IT HAPPEN THAT NOISY MILLIONS CAN ALWAYS PROCURE A NOISELESS DIVORCE? Justice is a big, creaking machine. What particular wheel is oiled into temporary smooth and silent running?"

How is it that people without money cannot enjoy this justice on a ball-bearing, smooth-running basis?

Into what particular slot of justice can a Vanderbilt drop the little persuader that stops the noise and makes slow-moving justice for the moment a sprinter of high speed?

A few of the people would like to know. A MAJORITY OF THE PEOPLE DON'T CARE. The latter fact is what makes life comfortable and easy for those that want a special brand of justice to suit themselves.

THE SOUL OF GRACE BROWN—WHERE IS IT?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your article concerning Grace Brown and her murderer, Gillette, is the most sensible I have read. I am thoroughly in accord with it.

It seems preposterous, on the part of the clergyman, that he should pass judgment without adequate proof, thereby ignoring the scriptural precept, "Judge not." For in what conceivable manner could he have learned that the girl did not repent?

Of course, that she did not repent is possible. But such a presumption is against human nature. It is opposed also by the records of crime. That a frail girl, knowing that she had sinned grievously, on being battered out of life by a fiend from whom no mercy was obtainable, would die impenitent, is unreasonable and unnatural. Rather would she do what thousands have done in similar circumstances—seek forgiveness where only it could be found.

On the other hand, to imagine the murderer penitent is almost impossible. No doubt the thief on the cross obtained pardon at the last moment. But the two cases are not parallel. If Gillette sincerely desired conversion, as the clergyman calls it, instead of persistently denying his crime, he would have avowed it from the first and welcomed his punishment, as the only reparation he could hope to offer. But to act thus openly was the last thought that entered his mind. Why? Because he was not truly repentant! Rather did he keep on, hoping against hope, that, through some weakness in the law, or by the clemency of the Governor, his sentence would be commuted, in which case he would still persist in proclaiming his innocence, thereby adding to his other crimes that of gross deception.

It is wrong to judge. But, to assume that the atrocious murderer, finding all hopes of life shattered, and terrified into seeking mercy by the fear (and by that sordid motive alone) that, in the abyss to which he was soon to be hurried, an awful retribution would be exacted from him, would obtain a better resting place than his innocent victim is illogical and monstrous.

JAMES KENNEDY.

[So keen an interest has been aroused by the question "Where Is the Soul of Grace Brown?" that it is impossible to publish even a small part of the letters received from day to day. Next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN, however, will contain a large number of interesting opinions on both sides of the controversy.

Science Proves That Color and Light Affect Our Minds Far More Than Most People Realize

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Do colors affect you? Are you conscious that certain shades of color give you pleasurable and happy sensations, and others irritate you, and others incline you to despondency?

If so, do not consider it an evidence of incipient insanity or blame yourself for being "queer."

Color plays a larger part in the every-day world than most of us suspect.

Here is what a noted physician, a graduate of the "old school," although he has gone forward into more progressive ideas, told me.

We were talking of the marvellous results which had been obtained by medical science from the employment of violet and X-rays in curing supposedly incurable diseases.

The physician showed me two plaster casts he had removed from the legs of a small boy, who had worn them for years, and who was pronounced incurable by the leading specialists in such maladies; yet, after some months of treatment under the violet and X-rays, the plaster casts were removed, and the little boy is rolling his hoop in the street, well and happy.

Red in Smallpox Cases

"We are discovering new wonders daily," the doctor said. "In many hospitals now they are placing red curtains about the beds of smallpox patients. It has been decided that light falling through red curtains prevents the pitting of the patient. There is a chemical property in red which produces this welcome result.

"Just so in violet; there are chemical properties which aid in the cure of other maladies.

"Color is now a recognized factor in the progressive medical world. And we are only in the morning of our discoveries. The world will be astonished in ten years' time at the revolution which will take place in the science of medical therapeutics. Drugs are fast becoming obsolete; the knife will be less popular, and only in extreme cases, and in accidents, will it eventually be used by reputable surgeons. LIGHT has come to take the place of old, ignorant methods."

"Incurable" Is Cured

Then the physician took me into a private room, where sat a young man of twenty-one years, for three months a patient of the light cure. The mother of the youth was present, and told me of the remarkable effect violet and X-ray treatment had produced on her son.

"For six years my boy had been growing steadily worse with inflammatory rheumatism," she said. "For one year before he came here he was confined to his bed, unable to move without excruciating pain. The best specialists in Greater New York assured me he would never leave his bed save for his tomb; yet in three months' time he is able to walk on crutches, and to sit up four hours a day."

Let there be light in the old medical school, since such things as these are taking place about us.

Meantime, let us study color, and realize that it has its place, aside from the decorative, in God's wonderful scheme of a beautiful world. Every color indicates a certain rate of vibration of light. It also represents a certain sound vibration. Light, sound, color are all related, then, and all affect the mental and physical well-being of humans.

Long ago the seers of the world said these things, and it is gratifying to find physical science corroborating the statements of the "wise men of old."

Thousands of years ago it was written and said that each mortal had an "aura," and that by its color the psychic eye could determine the thoughts of another, whether sad or glad, gloomy or hopeful, angry or loving.

Let Your "Aura" Be Pink

In London a year or two ago a scientific corroboration of this theory was produced by a chemically prepared screen, which brought out the colors surrounding the head of any one sitting in front of it, and, oddly enough, the mental states of each person corresponded with the colors the wise people thousands of years ago had declared such thoughts would produce; the brown "aura" despondency, the pink, love.

Let us open the windows of our souls and minds to all these glorious new discoveries. They are coming thick and fast in the next decade.

And by and by, after a century or two passes, all mortals may develop the psychic eye and be enabled to "see" the thoughts of one another.

Since many such people exist to-day all about us, it behooves us to cultivate a "pink aura" by loving thoughts and to avoid anger and evil passions, which display themselves in sullen red rays; or despondency, which clothes itself in muddy brown.

The pink aura, by all means!

Bobbie's Essays

By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

My Pa is riteing a novel wich is going to be pub-lished as soon as he can git a publisher.

The novel is going to be called Three Minnits. It is about a man that had a flirtashun with a gurl in a cafay & thay was at the saim table only three (3) minnits.

The gurl asked the heero if he wud mind buying sum wine & that took one (1) minnit, & it took the heero two (2) minnits to refuse & leeve the gurl & go out in the darkness.

I expect this novel is going to have a grate sale, sed Pa to Ma. I have sum vary fine lines in it. This is sum of the lines:

Algernon Fiddelface looked in the eyes (i's) of the only gurl that he had ever luved. She was vary slim & blond & sweet, with just a stray wisp of blond hair floteing down into her starry orbs.

My naim is Flora, she sed. Wud you mind calling me Flora? No, sed Algernon, wich reminds me of a perfeck lady, one (1) that will draw the line at a ham sanwich & similar refreshments, insted of laying for high priced food.

Cud you luv me enuff to marry me in the neer future, sed the gurl. I doant know, sed Algernon Fiddelface. Was you ever put out of the Nicker Bocker? Nevver, sed she.

Then I will think it over, sed Algernon. I feel straingely drawn toward you, beekaus you are fat & I always dreemed that I wud meet my darling when times was good & she was fat & reddy for a killing.

When Pa red this part of the novel Ma beegan to laff. I thought you sed in the beginning that she was slim & blonde, sed Ma. Of course, Ma sed, it is none of my business. I nevver rote a novel & I nevver will, Ma sed, but if I was riteing a novel I wud see to it that I got the right doap. A gurl cant be slim in one (1) paragraf & fat in the other, sed Ma.

Wait a minnit, sed Pa. Long yeers was suppoased to have elapsed since that glad day wen them two fond hearts met. The gurl got fat in the meentime, sed Pa, & heer is sum moar of the lines:

Twilite had calm. A sweet, gent breeze from the Oshun had sw across Noddle Ileland & the stars w shining in the sky. Far up in a t a little robin was singing Ime Af to Go Home in the Dark, & all n was at rest.

Algernon Fiddelface calm ou the street bekaus his brain was & he wanted to rest it a littel. Suddenly a Taxi Cab whizzed around the corner. It was running away.

Algernon caught a glimpse of a sweet yung faice framed in yellow hair—a faice that had on it a look of terribul horror & awful dispair. It was Flora!

I will saiv her, sed Algernon Fiddelface. I must saiv her. With Algernon Fiddelface to think was to ack. He sprang or sprung in front of the infur-iated steeds and shut off the power just as the motor man was about to run over the child. Then the majestick ship sailed out into the oshun, and the war was over.

I like yure nerve, she sed, trying to pull a novel like Three Minnits. Wen I look at the intelligent faice of our littel Bobbie it seems hard to realize that he has such a stupid father, sed Ma. In fack, Ma sed, I nevver cud understand how I caim to marry such a rummy.

Do you meen it, sed Pa, & Pa got up rite then & put on his coat. Do you mean that statement wich you did stait? Vary well, if you want to put out the fires of genius, sed Pa, I will write no more novels. I will now go out, sed Pa, & find a good poker gaim sumware in the naborhood. I may be back in the morning, sed Pa, & maybe nevver.

I think, Ma sed, that you will be back in Three Minnits, wich is as long as it taiks for you to git your coat on. Then Ma gaiv Pa a luving pat on the faice & Pa stayed hoam, beekaus wen Ma pats Pa on the faice she pats with her Nuckels.
